Project Title	Research Needed: Preventing Violent Extremism (PVE) through Youth- and Female-Focused Interventions
Project Summary	Research global prevention interventions and developments with a focus on female and youth participation in PVE efforts. As an intern, your research will put you at the forefront of enhancing the USG's goal of PVE and de-radicalization in Albania through partner programs and counter-messaging.
Country	Albania

Project Description

Prevention of Violent Extremism (PVE) refers to proactive efforts to address the conditions under which extremist recruitment and radicalization take place.

If you are looking to make a difference and assist the USG in moving towards a more secure world then here is the perfect opportunity for you!

USAID/Albania Program Office is looking for two interns who can research and summarize global developments, interventions, and research in the prevention of extremism and radicalization, specifically through youth and female engagement. Interns will also create a database of primary resources (bibliography, prevention programs, and organizations working on the issue) on PVE interventions. Source materials may come from a variety of media, from think tanks to government agencies to open source, but should all be related to regional (Western Balkans-Europe) and global C/PVE programs, products, best practices, and trends related to successful youth and female specific interventions.
